- This class was a lot more difficult than I thought it would be. It makes me want to do it again so that I don't make the same mistakes next time, but it's also hard enough that I'm not sure if I want to do all that extra effort.
- Great teaching style

- Don't make us look for the Tascam Pro thingy. It's too much of a headache to find something that most people say doesn't exist.

- Olson is a great instructor. He used multiple examples and thoroughly explained each subject to students.
- I think he definitely did showed that he really knew the information, and was probably a really good teacher for someone who is trying to be an audio engineer, but for someone who has to take this class and isn't an MPRT major i feel it was very difficult to follow and keep up with the work. I would recommend another simpler class for non MPRT majors if possible, similar to what they do with musical theater students who have to learn theory.

- I would again recommend making the work load for this class different or people who are not majoring in Music Production, I feel alot of the information went over my head and i wasn't too motivated to learn it, because the information isn't a huge part of my own major, and I would guess that other students had this problem.

- Professor Olson is a great teacher. He was always over-prepared for class, and demonstrated his knowledge of the material very well while also keeping a sense of humor. He made it very clear that he was always available for outside help if I, or any of the other students needed it. His expectations were clear and he held everyone to the same high standard. He let us know well in advance when projects were due, and therefore we were given plenty of time to plan accordingly and finish them. In several circumstances, the wording in one or two questions for the project requirements could have been different, as sometimes it was unclear. But all in all, a good class.

- Some projects we were only given one weeks time to fully complete. Class should be given more time to work on projects.
